

Abstract

A technique of encoding a document to prevent undetected alteration of the document includes identifying symbols to be changed by applying font changes to the identified symbols and generating font change pointers that track changes applied to the identified symbols. Techniques to decode and detect changes are also described.

20334837.doc